

Sunday, Andy presented the second installment in his series "Big, Big God". Comparisons between the relative size of our earth and the size of other planets of our galaxy, and of the universe, illustrated how tiny each of us really is. In a world where we tend to think that life centers around us, the reality is that all of creation is a story about who God is, the creator of it all. The more we get to really know God, the bigger He gets. God is huge and we are miniscule, and yet we are each part of God's big story describing Himself. The amazing thing is that we each are a vital part of God's story. Our plan may not be His plan, but we can learn His plan for us if we come to know Him. He is infinite. We are finite, and yet He has a purpose in mind for each of us.
